Eco Performance Award is entering round nine

Ratingen, xx/xx/2016. On 22 September 2016 the Eco Performance Award, Europe's leading sustainability award, is entering round nine in the Peppermint Pavillion on the former Expo grounds in Hanover. It looks like the award already has Europe-wide appeal: "Around half of the submissions come from other European countries. For example from Austria, Italy, Luxembourg as well as from Turkey", says a delighted Prof. Wolfgang Stölzle, jury chairman and tenured professor of logistics management at the University of St.Gallen. "We are very pleased about this, because it shows that sustainability is taken seriously internationally as well."

A new application and selection process was introduced for the ninth round. Interested companies can register online and submit a short application. This allows the applicants to provide an initial outline of their sustainability concepts and to convince the jury of their potential with relatively little effort. The most promising applicants got the chance to submit a full application by 31 March 2016. Three to five applicants will be invited to the final selection round to present their concept to the jury in person. The winners will be honoured at the award ceremony on 22 September 2016 in Hanover. The application period for the Eco Performance Award 2017 will begin after this year's award ceremony.
